Committee OKs Survivor Benefits Bill; Senate Action Likely Within Two Weeks

The multi-million dollar Survivor Benefits bill has won the approval of the Senate Finance Committee and is expected to be voted on in the Senate late next week or the first week in July.

The measure was endorsed by the Senate group substantially as it passed the House last year, although the plan was made to apply only to the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

All references to the Public Health Service and to the Coast and Geodetic Survey were deleted from the Senate version.

In addition, the Committee voted to continue the $10,000 free insurance coverage for Servicemen in time of war.

Another revision would prevent military service from being counted for both Social Security and Civil Service Retirement.

As approved by the group, the new survivor program will take effect on 1 Jan 1957.

The main features of the bill remain intact.

All military personnel are placed under contributory Social Security.

Widows' dependency-indemnity compensation payments are increased to amounts ranging from $112 to $242 (see chart, page 3).

Hundreds In Army Will Compete For Out-Of-Line Temp. Promotions

The Army, which abandoned the practice several years ago, will reinstitute out-of-line promotions for "truly outstanding" officers. Hundreds will be considered for accelerated advancement.

First selections—to colonel—will be made under the new program by a board which meets on 26 June.

On 17 July, outstanding captains will be screened for promotion to major and early in 1957 a board will review the records of majors for advancement to temporary lieutenant colonel.

The maximum number of "truly outstanding" promotions to colonel will be 15 per cent of the total number selected from the primary zone.

The ceiling will be 10 per cent for promotions to lieutenant colonel and major.

THE ESSENTIAL DIFFERENCE between the new program and the one previously used in making out-of-line promotions is that recommendations will no longer be made by commanders in the field.

Selection boards will consider the records of all officers who have completed minimum years of service. Recommendations that are submitted from the field will not be sent to the board, the Army stressed.

In the past, considerable difficulties were encountered because of the fact that some commanders were more liberal than others, or vice versa, in designating officers as being "outstanding."

TO BE ELIGIBLE, the only requirement for consideration under the "truly outstanding" program is that an officer complete a minimum period of service in his current grade, as shown below, as of 31 Dec. in the year of consideration:

To Colonel 5 years
To Lt. Col. 4 years
To Major 3 years

The primary zone of consideration for promotion to colonel is now 31 December 1945. The zone for promotion to lieutenant colonel that was used by the last selection board was 30 November 1950, and there are said to be about 1100 selectees remaining to be advanced.

The new primary zone of consideration for promotion to temporary major is 30 November 1950.

ARMY UNDER SECRETARY CHARLES C. FINUCANE stopped briefly in Hawaii en route to the Eniwetok test site recently, and was met at Hickam AFB by Maj. Gen. Edwin J. Messinger, USA, left, Commanding the 25th Infantry Division at Schofield Barracks, and Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Powell, USA, Pacific Army Commander. On his return to Hawaii from the testing site, Mr. Finucane inspected military bases and activities on Oahu during a three-day stopover, before enplaning for the mainland and Washington with Mrs. Finucane, who vacationed in Hawaii while he was at the test site.

Senate Group Adds $1.3 Billion To Defense Budget; Asks More Men And Planes For AF

The Senate Appropriations Committee added $1,348,668,000 to the fiscal '57 Defense Department budget.

The Air Force would get $1.3 billion; Army funds are boosted by $48 million and the Navy won an increase of $463,000.

Here is where the extra Air Force money will go:

$800 million for production of heavy bombers and, "if deemed advisable," for increased production of fighter aircraft.

$77 million to accelerate the air defense missile program, increase support equipment for missile programs, modify and align training equipment with recent changes in aircraft programs, and to introduce the western extension of the distant early warning line.

$100 million to expedite the Air Force research and development program.

$96 million for operation and maintenance expenses needed to support the increased operational and force build-up.

$27 million for additional personnel and for permanent changes of station to accomplish the required manning of the additional six wings and support units to be activated during the next year.

The additional $48,205,000 voted for the Army includes $124 million for maintenance and operation expenses; $20 million for National Guard construction (mostly armories); $15.4 million to increase the budgeted end strength of the Army National Guard from 408,100 to 425,000 during the next 12 months, to increase ANG technicians and to enable ANG teams to attend the national matches during 1957; and $237,000 for the National Board for Promotion of Rifle Practice.

Navy appropriations were increased $500,000 to provide for the maintenance, protection and conservation of the Government's oil-shale plant at Rifle, Colo., but the Committee eliminated $37,000 which had been provided by the House to furnish and maintain three new sets of quarters for the Deputy Chiefs of Naval Operations. The Committee said "Funding has not yet been completed for these quarters and it is doubtful if they will be ready for occupancy during the coming year."

Army Reveals New Perm. Colonel Plan, Vacancies Will Be Held To Assure Equity

The Army has unveiled a new long-range plan for permanent promotions to colonel, designed to assure equitable advancement opportunities for years to come.

For the present, it will mean not filling all vacancies in order to guarantee large numbers of Regulars with basic dates from 1940 to 1943 of a fair chance at promotion to colonel.

The new system will mean that each year a relatively constant selection ratio will be maintained, despite changes in the number of officers to be considered.

Thus, for example, if the selection rate to permanent colonel is, say, 50-60 per cent this year and next it would remain at about that level in later years when greater numbers come up for consideration.

The Army's new plan, which is similar to one that has been put into effect by the Air Force, was made known as preparations were being completed for release of new selections to permanent colonel.

Here is the complete text of the Army's announcement of its new policy to equalize Regular colonel promotions.

A POLICY TO EQUALIZE present and future promotion opportunity in the grade of permanent colonel of the Regular Army, was announced today by the Department of the Army.

The plan involves a long-range approach that will provide all officers with equal selection opportunity to that grade. A Selection Board of general officers convened recently for the purpose of selecting colonels, RA, of the Army Promotion List.

Under the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, promotion to permanent colonel is limited most stringently. The total number of permanent colonels is restricted to 8% of the total Regular officers authorized; and promotion may be made only as vacancies occur. Use of the "best-qualified" method of selection, too, insures a high degree of competition.

A LARGE NUMBER of Regular officers are concentrated in the "year groups" with basic dates from 1940 to 1943. Therefore, unless action were taken now, the size of the groups would force the selection rate down when these large groups come up for consideration in the future. This effect would occur because of the limited spaces available in comparison with the number of competitors. In view of this, the Department of the Army has had under study a plan to level off fluctuations in promotion opportunity. By using a uniform selection procedure, a stable system was designed. This will establish equivalent opportunity for all officers of the Army Promotion List.

The plan involves in general terms, making room for those officers in the World War II "hump" by saving vacancies ahead. This means the application of uniform selection procedures to all year groups coming up for permanent colonel — both now and in the future.

While the plan will permit an even application of promotion opportunity, it will not increase the authorized number of permanent colonels. This number is limited by law.

The framers of the Officers Personnel Act of 1947 recognized that, as a result of this limitation, all qualified officers could not be promoted to colonel. As a result, the mandatory passover and elimination provision applies only to the lower grades and is not applicable to the grade of permanent colonel. Upon becoming eligible for consideration to that grade, officers are considered each year until selected or until retired.

NON-SELECTION to the grade of Colonel reflects in no way upon the individual qualifications of the officers concerned; nor does it alter the Army's continued reliance upon and need for their services.

This program represents another of the long-range developments which adds to the efficiency of the Army by making the most effective use of its officers. This is a further step toward maintaining the quality level of the Army at the highest point possible; regardless of fluctuations in the number of officers in the various "year groups." All permanent lieutenant colonels will have about a two out of three chance for selection regardless of their particular "year group." Thus, career opportunities for selection to this grade will apply across the board, into the foreseeable future.

Mr. Marker PIU for MDW

George J. Marker, assistant public information officer for the Military District of Washington, has been elevated to the post of MDW public information officer on the staff of Col. George R. Creel, USA, Chief of Information. Mr. Marker replaces Paul J. Culler, who transferred to the Army Transportation Corps.

Chief Makes Warrant

Chief Yeoman Bill Mendenhall, USN, has been appointed to the temporary grade of warrant officer, W-1. He will have a Ship's Clerk designation and a date of rank from 1 July 1953 upon acceptance of the appointment.

GOVERNMENT CHIEFS HEAR PAY PLEA

Assistant Defense Secretary Carter L. Burgess, given a prominent part in the program, told the 1956 Secretaries Conference at Quantico, Va., on 22 June of the need for a new military pay increase.

The second speaker on the weekend program, Mr. Burgess recounted progress that has been made in career incentive programs and outlined the work that will be done by the Cordiner Committee in fashioning a new pay raise proposal.

The Pentagon's new pay raise inquiry, directed by President Ralph J. Cordiner of the General Electric Company, got under way with a meeting last week in the Office of Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

The Secretaries Conference at Quantico this weekend was to concentrate on problems that will confront the Services in the period 1956-1960.

The Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force were listed as speakers, as well as their military chiefs. General Thomas D. White, USAF, Acting CofS, spoke in place of General Nathan F. Twining, USAF, who is in Moscow.

Mr. Burgess was placed second on the program, immediately after an opening Intelligence Briefing by RADM. Edwin T. Layton, USN, Joint Intelligence Committee, Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The windup of the business sessions of the Quantico meeting was scheduled for Saturday noon, when Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, JCS Chairman, was slated to discuss "Military Strategy and Posture, 1956-1960."

Navy Doctors Check Polio Outbreak, Vaccinate 26,000 Kids & Parents

Salk vaccine apparently can be given with relative safety to both children and adults during an outbreak of poliomyelitis, according to RADM. Bartholomew W. Hogan, MC, Navy Surgeon General.

Releasing the results of the use of the vaccine during an outbreak of the disease last Fall among Navy families in Hawaii, the Medical Chief stated that there is no evidence that the vaccine caused paralysis among persons who were possibly infected with the virus at the time of vaccination.

Because past outbreaks had tended to be more severe in military families stationed in Hawaii than in the civilian population, it was decided to step-up the shot program. Approximately 26,000 children and parents were vaccinated to check the spread of the disease.

OUTBREAKS OF POLIO have tended to last for several months in Hawaii. About 30 days after the stepped-up program was started, the outbreak was almost over. The peak of the outbreak occurred during the period in which most individuals received their first shot.

Because of the short duration of the outbreak it was not possible to obtain conclusive proof as to the effectiveness of the vaccine in prevention of poliomyelitis, although the results strongly suggest this, the Navy states.

The Navy made a careful analysis to learn if giving the vaccine under conditions of rapid spread of polio to these families had any adverse effects. No evidence of harmful effect could be found.

CAPT. ROBERT S. POOS, MC, USN, Officer-in-Charge, Preventive Medicine Unit Number Six, Pearl Harbor, T. H., was responsible for the early detection of the outbreak and for recommending the accelerated vaccine program.

Captain Poos, with the assistance of Dr. Neal Natanson, Chief of the Public Health Service Poliomyelitis Surveillance Unit, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Atlanta, Ga., and Capt. John R. Seal, MC, USN, Head, Communicable Disease Control Branch, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, has prepared a detailed report of the outbreak in Hawaii and the results of the vaccine program.

The report was presented by Captain Seal on 14 June before the Section on Preventive and Industrial Medicine and Public Health at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association in Chicago, Ill.

SEC.Y. QUARLES CONCERNED OVER RENT RISE

The Air Force has let it be known that Secretary Donald A. Quarles is taking a "personal interest" in the problem of Wherry Housing rent increases raised by the recent Supreme Court decision (THE JOURNAL 2 June) authorizing States to collect taxes on the projects.

It's estimated that 59,000 Service families are confronted with the prospect of increased rent costs.

Secretary Quarles, following a discussion with General E. W. Rawlings, USAF, head of the Air Materiel Command, and Maj. Gen. William F. McKee, USAF, AMC Vice Commander, stated that he "has been concerned over the problem for some time and that he would intensify his efforts to find a solution that will be fair both to military personnel and to the operators of such housing projects."

A point is being made that military personnel have had no increase in rental allowances since May 1952.

OK NEW CLAIMS CEILING

President Eisenhower has signed legislation which establishes a new personnel claims ceiling for military families.

The new Act (Public Law 571) gives the Armed Forces authority to settle all claims against the U.S. for loss or damage of personal property valued up to $6250 for which the Government is at fault.

Who Will Be Next Navy JAG?

President Eisenhower momentarily is expected to name a new Judge Advocate General of the Navy.

If he follows the recommendation of Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas, the officer appointed to the top legal post will be Capt. Chester C. Ward, USN.

The President could, however, side-step the Secretary's suggestion and appoint RADM. William R. Sheeley, USN, former Assistant JAG who has been Acting Judge Advocate General since the departure this week of RADM. Ira H. Nunn, USN, who had served in the post for the past four years.

Admiral Sheeley is the only law specialist in the Navy ever to be named by a selection board for advancement to flag rank. His selection was approved by both Secretary Thomas and the President last July.

Captain Ward, currently assigned to the staff of the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, was passed over by the same selection board. His appointment, if it goes forward from the White House, is likely to raise some questions on Capitol Hill where it was expected that Admiral Sheeley would be named to the post.

One member of Congress, who declined to have his name used, told THE JOURNAL he plans to investigate the matter.

Senate to Act

From first page—

The minimum six months death gratuity is increased from $469 to $800 and the maximum is lowered from $6,857 to $3,000.

All Federal Employees Compensation Act benefits are erased for Reservists called to active duty in the future.

The $10,000 free life insurance is erased for Servicemen on active duty in peacetime.

The Senate Committee was not expected to file its formal report on the bill for another week or 10 days, but a spokesman for the group said only "refining technical amendments" will be added.

Senate approval of the measure will send the bill to conference to iron out House and Senate differences.

Senate Group Votes On Force-Out Pay

The Senate Armed Services Committee was meeting as THE JOURNAL went to press to vote on the $11.8 million force-out pay bill which gives Reserve officers involuntarily released from active duty a lump-sum payment similar to separation pay for Regulars.

More than four thousand Reserve officers scheduled to be involuntarily released during the next six months—as well as all officers involuntarily released in the future—would benefit from the measure (HR 9952).

Officers receiving the lump-sum rehabilitation pay must have completed five years of continuous active duty immediately preceding their release.

Only those released after the effective date of the bill would receive the pay.

Under the terms of the bill, as it passed the House, eligible officers would receive one-half of one month's basic pay for each year of service through the 18th year.

Survivor Benefits

Ups Retired Income

Retirement incomes of military personnel who retire in the years ahead will be boosted as a result of the contributory Social Security coverage provided in the Survivor Benefits bill now pending enactment.

Charts worked up by the General Accounting Office show that the average Serviceman will receive from $816 to $1104 under Social Security—and in addition to his retired pay—after he reaches age 65—if he is single. If he has a wife, the average amount will be from $1224 to $1656.

The following chart shows how enlisted men of the two top grades, warrant officers and officers will fare under the Social Security coverage. Retirement pay is based on 30 years' service. The amount of Social Security is based on an assumed average wage for each pay grade and on the basis that the man has no covered employment other than military.

The amounts shown do not include the benefit for the wife. If the retiree has a wife, the Social Security benefit is 50 per cent higher.

Vast Expansion Set For Army Reserve, Sec'y Brucker Tells ROA Convention

Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker has outlined a vigorous program for expansion of the Reserve, which will see enlisted men joining units at the rate of about 10,000 a month one year from now.

Speaking 20 June before the 30th annual convention of the Reserve Officers Association in New Orleans, Secretary Brucker told how "the ranks of the organized units of our Army Reserve are now beginning to fill out."

He said six-month trainees now are returning to units at the rate of 400-600 per month. This will increase to about 500 around the end of the year. Beginning in August 1957, enlisted men of the Army with a Reserve obligation will be coming into units at the rate of about 10,000 a month.

"We are getting a Reserve with a real substance," Mr. Brucker asserted.

He reported plans for a large increase in training facilities. The Secretary noted that 157 Reserve Training Centers have been completed or are under construction.

The Army plans to complete over 200 more during the coming year and by 1960 plans to have a total of 1765 centers.

RECORD NUMBER IN RESERVE TRAINING

Approximately 12,000 young men between the ages of 17-18½, the largest number to participate in active duty under provisions of the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, will be in training for six months at five Army installations by 24 June, the Pentagon reported late this week.

The program, which gives a draft-deferred status to the individual, has attracted 25,701 young men since its inception last August.

The six months active training for Reservists is being conducted at Ft. Ord, Calif., Ft. Jackson, S. C., Ft. Chaffee, Ark., Ft. Knox, Ky., Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., and Ft. Bliss, Tex.

The program is being monitored by Maj. Gen. P. D. Ginder, USA, Special Assistant for Reserve Components.

WAVE Promotions Bill Signed

Increased promotion opportunities for WAVE lieutenants have been approved by the President as Public Law 585.

The bill is designed to reduce the unusually heavy forced attrition of WAVE officers serving in the grade of lieutenant.

Authority is given the Navy to use unfilled WAVE commander billets to promote more officers to lieutenant commander. Also, the Navy is authorized for the next four years to select an unspecified number of WAVE lieutenants with 13 years' service for retention on active duty until they complete 15 years' service.

Under previous law, WAVES with 13 years' service who were not on a promotion list to the next higher grade must be separated from the Naval service.

The legislation also provides permanent authority for the temporary promotion of women officers to the grade of lieutenant (jg) in the Navy and first lieutenant in the Marine Corps before completion of three years' service.

SOCIAL SECURITY COSTS $2 BILLION

Servicemen and women will pay more than $2 billion into the Social Security coffers during the next 18 years under the terms of the Survivor Benefits bill now pending enactment.

The top annual cost to the individual for the next three years will be $84 (two per cent of the maximum taxable income, $4,200). The annual contribution of Service personnel during this period will be approximately $114 million, with the Government contributing a like amount.

Social Security rates increase to 2½ percent in 1960, which means that the top annual cost to the individual will be $105. In 1965, the rate goes up to three percent for a top payment of $126, in 1970 to 3½ percent for a top payment of $147, and in 1975 to four percent for a top payment of $168.

Based on an estimated military strength of 2.85 million each year, the Servicemen's contribution is expected to be $114 million annually for the first three years, $142 million annually for the next five years, $171 million annually for the next five years, $200 million annually for the next five years, and $228 million annually thereafter.

Chart Shows New Dependency-Indemnity Compensation Under Survivor Benefits Bill

Here are the new rates for dependency and indemnity compensation which would go to widows of military personnel who die on active duty or from service-connected causes under the terms of the Survivor Benefits Bill approved this week by the Senate Finance Committee.

The compensation rates vary as shown on this table according to the grade or rank last held by the serviceman and the number of years of active military service. The rates shown would be payable to the widow, without regard to the number of children, for her remaining lifetime or as long as she remains unmarried. Widows with children would receive additional compensation until the youngest child reaches age 18.

The dependency and indemnity compensation rates are based upon a flat 12 per cent of the basic pay authorized under the Career Incentive Act of 1955. This means that widows now entitled to VA compensation would be entitled to the new dependency and indemnity compensation computed on the current basic pay rates for the rank and years of service of the serviceman when he was last in active service.

Navy Issues New Rule On Per Diem Pay

Under Secretary Thomas S. Gates, jr., has issued an instruction clarifying the Navy's policy on per diem payments to officers and men on TAD away from parent units.

Section 303 of the Career Compensation Act provides that all members of the uniformed services are entitled to travel and transportation allowances for travel performed under orders when away from their designated posts of duty regardless of the length of time away from such designated duty posts.

The policy of the Navy Department, Secretary Gates says, is that all officers and men required to be absent from their permanent stations shall be issued temporary additional duty orders, whether or not quarters and subsistence are available at the point of TAD, so that they will be entitled to the per diem allowances provided in the Joint Travel Regulations.

This, it is stated, includes members of mobile units.

Hereafter, the order states, commands are directed to issue TAD orders to all personnel who are required to be absent from their permanent station. Members who are currently deployed will be paid appropriate per diem allowances.

Complete details are contained in SecNav Instruction 7720.19.

Lt. Col. Sutton Scores Superman Feat—550 Points On Physical Test

"It has been a long time since I was impressed by anything as much as your physical fitness performance. The mere thought of it leaves me exhausted."

That's the comment of Col. A. J. Goodpaster, USA, a key White House aide, in a letter of congratulations to Lt. Col. Clyde Terry Sutton, jr., USA, S-4, Headquarters Area Command, APO 403, New York, which takes in the Heidelberg area of Germany.

Colonel Sutton was acclaimed for scoring 550 points on a recent physical fitness test. This is believed to be an Army record.

He received the maximum of 500 points for his performance and earned 50 additional points for his age, 40. In earning the 500 points, he did 20 pull-ups, 75 squat jumps, 60 pushups, 79 situps and 41 squat thrusts.

Colonel Goodpaster said: "I feel sure I speak for the President in congratulating you on your persistence and determination in developing such a splendid physical fitness record—I am sure that it must be both an inspiration and a challenge to the enlisted men and the officers of your command."

Dentist Cited For Finger Splint Aid

Lt. Col. Wendell T. Jackson, DC, USA, Presidio of San Francisco, has received the Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant for outstanding work in the field of orthopedics.

He was cited for work in Korea in devising a method by which dental plastic could be used for orthopedic splints on fractured fingers in place of wooden splints.

"The design and development of this splint which is vastly superior to previous types contributed in great measure to improvement in techniques of treatment and faster rehabilitation of patients," the Army said.

Trainee Increase Causes Change At Bliss

Expansion of facilities to meet an expected increase in trainees this summer has prompted a major change in the command structure of the U. S. Army Training Center, AAA, at Ft. Bliss, Tex.

The new plan calls for 12 provisional battalions composed of approximately 48 line batteries as opposed to the present system of five battalions with 26 batteries. Groups of four battalions will form training groups, with three groups expected to be established. Each group will instruct a specific phase of training.

The 1st Training Group will consist of Reserve Forces trainees. Active Army trainees receiving advanced individual training with antiaircraft artillery weapons will compose the 2d Group. And the 3d Group will teach basic combat training to incoming inductees.

Boards Meet To Pick Staff Corps Flags

Selection boards to choose active duty Medical, Supply, Civil Engineer and Dental Corps captains for advancement to flag rank will be convened in the Bureau of Naval Personnel on 17 July.

Eligible for consideration are regular four stripe officers whose Line running mates are senior to the Line officer with Signal Number 2385 in the 1 Jan. 1955 Register.

Reserve officers eligible include those with dates of rank as captains from 1 July 1954 or earlier.

The promotion zone in each Corps ends with the junior officer whose Line running mate is senior to the Line officer with Signal Number 851.

USS Saratoga Goes Out For Sea Trial

The USS Saratoga, sister ship to the USS Forrestal, has been turned over to the Navy's Board of Inspection and Survey for preliminary acceptance trials and inspection.

The Navy took the giant ship out for 10 days of trial, starting on 18 June.

The 60,000-ton ship, commanded by Capt. Robert Stroh, USN, returned from a week of builder's trials on 9 June, and spent a week in the New York Naval Shipyard getting adjustments.

Adm. Albert C. Mumma, USN, Chief of the Bureau of Ships, said that all trials run during the first week were satisfactorily completed. The only incident worth noting, he said, was the temporary loss of lubrication in one shaft which necessitated installation of spare thrust shoes at sea and refinishing to remove score from the thrust collar.

The builder's run at full power on June 16-17 went off without incident.

While the Saratoga's hull configuration closely resembles that of the Forrestal, her power plant is more powerful.

After the Saratoga returns from the preliminary Navy run, she will be tied up for about two weeks for outfitting. She then will go on her first shakedown cruise.

USMC Convenes Boards To Choose Generals

Marine Corps selection boards to promote brigadier generals and colonels will be convened on 9 and 16 July.

The major general board will consider all active duty unrestricted officers who are serving in grade on the day the board meets. The promotion zone extends from Brig. Gen. Thomas G. McFarland, USMC, Signal No. 9, through Brig. Gen. Thomas G. Ennis, USMC, Signal No. 22, in the 1 Jan. 1956 Regular Register. There are 11 eligible officers in the zone.

The promotion zone for advancement to one-star rank extends from Col. James H. Brower, USMC, Signal No. 90, through Col. Donald W. Fuller, USMC, Signal No. 124—a 33-man zone.

The brigadier board also will consider all colonels who will have had three years' service in grade as of 30 June 1957. The last man in the Register meeting this requirement is Col. James C. Magee, USMC, Signal No. 445.

Marine Corps Adopts New Drill Formation

The Marine Corps has dropped the "Square Drill" formation and adopted a "new drill" system designed to preserve the integrity of the fire team and emphasize the position of junior NCO's.

Under the new system, the fire team leader is taken out of the ranks and placed in command position.

Headquarters states that the new formation will enable squads to execute all the movements which a platoon can do under either the Landing Party Manual of 1950 or the Landing Forces Manual of 1927.

It can be used by squads ranging in strength from seven to 13 men.

Another feature is the interval used. At the normal interval and distance, only the LPM is used. For example, "by the right flank march!" In using close-interval and distance, only "Squads Right" is used.

All the new drill system formations will be composed of three ranks unless file closers are employed.

The 13-man squad is made up of one squad leader and three fire teams of four men each, with the addition of another platoon sergeant, platoon guides and a platoon leader. File closers can be added to either squads or platoons.

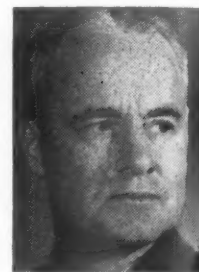

The new system was developed by Col. Loren Hoffner, USMC, Commanding Officer, Training and Test Regiment, Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.

← SSGT. DONALD D. THORNE of Marine Barracks, Bremerton, Wash., accepts the Marine Corps Pistol Trophy from Maj. Gen. Randolph C. Berkeley, USMC-Ret., for having won the Marine Corps Pistol Match with a high score of 555x600, in the Matches at Parris Island, S. C.

Gen's Robinson And Twining Get 3 Stars

President Eisenhower has nominated Major Generals Ray A. Robinson, USMC, and Merrill B. Twining, USMC, for three-star rank.

General Robinson, Chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group at the Hague, will become Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, succeeding Lt. Gen. Alfred H. Noble, USMC, as previously reported in THE JOURNAL. General Noble was nominated by the President to be placed on the retired list in his present rank.

M/G Twining

General Twining, Commanding General of the 1st Marine Division, will succeed Lt. Gen. Edwin A. Pollock, USMC, as Commandant of the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.

General Pollock will become Commanding General of the Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, succeeding Lt. Gen. William O. Brice, USMC, who was nominated by the President for three-star rank on the retired list.

All of the assignments, as well as those of a large number of other general officers were listed in THE JOURNAL of 24 March.

New Post For Col. Rottet

Appointment of Col. Ralph K. Rottet, USMC, as Chief of Staff of the Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic is announced by Lt. Gen. Alfred H. Noble, USMC, Commanding General.

Assignment of Colonel Rottet, a naval aviator, to the key ground staff billet is in keeping with a Marine Corps policy of interchanging ground and air officer assignments, General Noble stated. He has been serving as Assistant Chief of Staff for plans and operations in Aircraft, FMF, Atlantic. He was a member of the Marine Corps Advanced Research Group at Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.

His appointment fills a vacancy created with the transfer last month of Col. G. R. E. Shell, USMC, to assume command of the 1st Marine Brigade at Kaneohe Bay, T. H.

Navy Seeks Top Use Of R&D Engineers

SAN FRANCISCO

THE Navy has "declared war" on the misuse of scarce engineering and scientific talent, RADM. William A. Schoech, USN, Assistant Chief for Research and Development, Bureau of Aeronautics, told members of the Aviation Writers Association in convention here.

Speaking at a meeting sponsored by the Garrett Corporation Aircorps Division, Admiral Schoech declared that while a great deal is being written and said about our lag in producing scientists and engineers too little has been said about the better utilization of the ones we have.

About 20 per cent of the average engineer's time is "cluttered up with non-engineering duties," he said, such as filing of papers and the searching of files or references. There is also duplication of effort—"too many people, too many questions, too many answers"—and the carrying of technical studies and projects "past the point of no return, this can be called an 'elucidation of the obvious.'"

"We have declared war," Admiral Schoech said, "upon this sort of misappropriation of technical talent wherever we have found it in BuAer. We have tried to build the proper fixes into our new organization plan. We have tried to dampen out this sort of slippage."

At the same meeting Capt. A. B. Metsger, USN, Deputy Chief of Naval Research, gave a comprehensive discussion of the Vanguard Satellite program.

Navy Names Members Of USNR Staff Boards

The Navy has announced the memberships of boards which are in session to pick Staff Corps Reserve lieutenants (jg) for promotion.

The boards convened on 5 June.

Board memberships are:

Supply—Capt. L. V. Hallberg; Cdrs. J. P. Piepgrass, R. F. Rely, R. J. Wuest and N. W. Shorb; Lt. Cdr. M. Schuller, and Lt. J. E. Effner, Recorder.

Medical, Medical Service and Nurse—Capts. J. D. Vlecehl, President; W. A. Ryan, J. J. Hayes and M. A. Jacobson; Cdrs. A. Y. Kevorkian and Hazel M. Grainger, and Lt. G. H. Henry, Recorder.

Notes On The Navy

APPLICATIONS FOR APPOINTMENTS in the Navy Dental Corps are on the up-swing. Between 1 January and 21 May, the Dental Division received 65 appointment requests. Of this number, 20 were from Reserve officers who have served on active duty for more than six months. The remaining 45 were from dental students who either participated in this year's Navy Senior Dental Student Program as Ensigns 1955, USNR, or from among those who have been picked for Naval Dental Internships in fiscal year 1957.

THE FIRST 50 PETTY OFFICERS picked for the new Enlisted Advanced School Program will be sent to Purdue

University in September. The PO's will be required to spend two years on active duty for each year he attends college. The selectees will study in the Engineering and Technical Institute.

NAMES HAVE BEEN GIVEN to two gasoline tankers under construction. The AOG-81 will be known as the USS Atlanta and the AOG-82 as the USS Chattahoochee.

PLANS TO ADVANCE about 1,960 Navy EM to officer rank each year have been adopted.

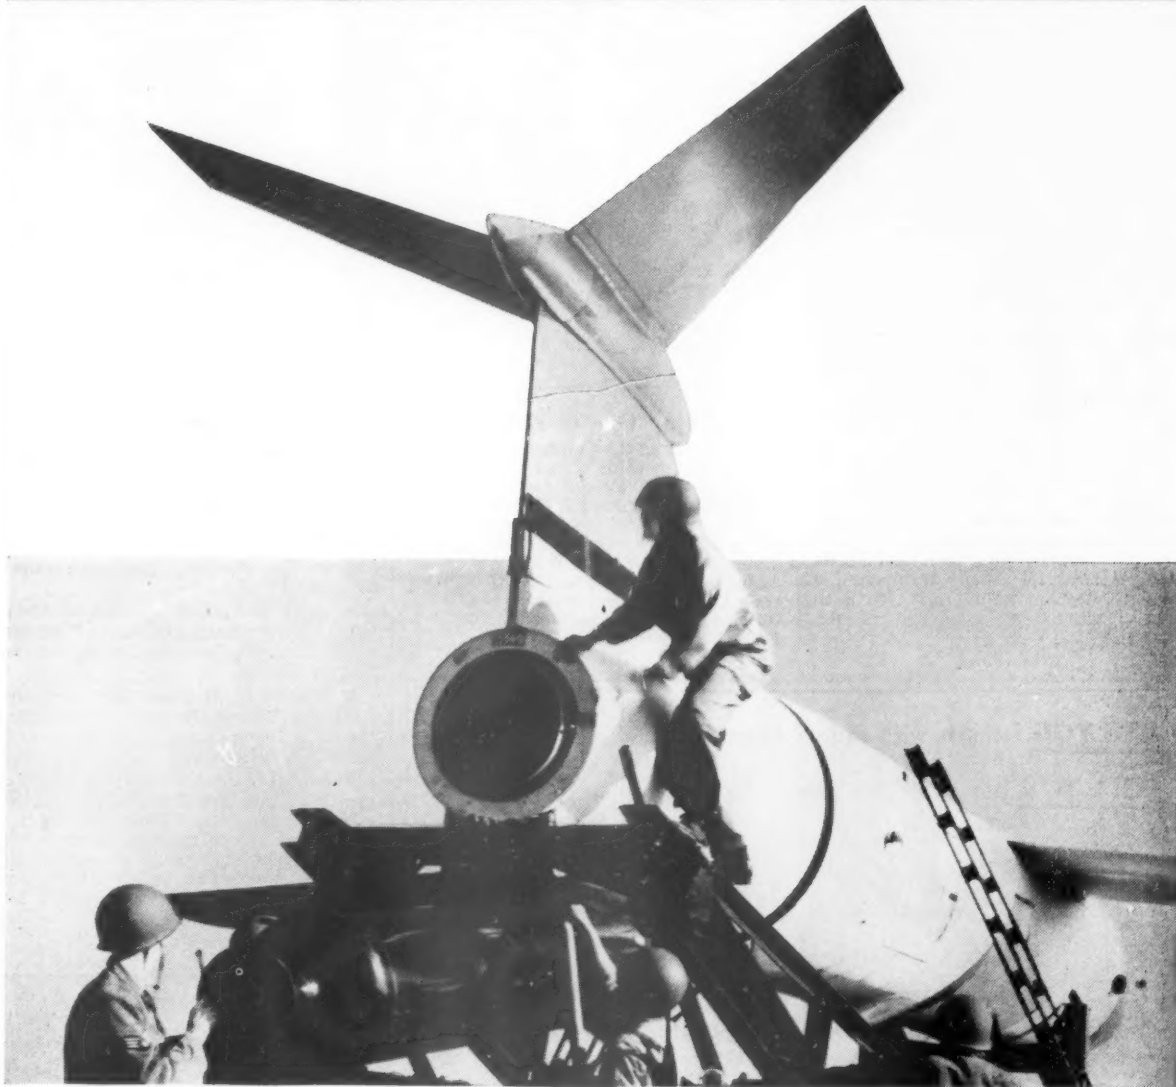

Those picked for commissions, in the Regular Navy or the Naval Reserve, will be made through one of the Navy's eight continuing programs. Here's a list of the programs and the anticipated annual

"FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE"

"Six boxes and a handbook."

Those were the materials that have proved out one of the big engineering achievements of our time. It concerns a whole new concept of customer service developed to provide optimum efficiency in the delivery and performance of weapon systems.

The TM-61 Martin Matador shown here at an overseas Air Force base arrived there in six packing cases, and was stockpiled in a storage depot.

When the test-drill whistle blew, a team of Air Force technicians assembled and checked out the missile, complete with mobile guidance system, and ready for firing, in less than six hours.

Martin engineering service today covers every aspect of the customer's requirements for effective operation and maintenance of the product. This includes packaging, delivery, customer training, field service and contractor maintenance.

TAC Families Slated For Better Deal With Improved Squadron Rotation Program

The Tactical Air Command, with a constantly improving capability for rapid deployment and availability of increased base facilities abroad, is working on a program that could mean a decrease in separations of family members. This is reported in newly released Senate testimony of General O. P. Weyland, USAF, TAC commander.

"The system we are working toward is a rotational system whereby one combat squadron out of a group will constantly be in place," he explained to the Symington Subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

In the next several years, he added, the number of Tactical Air Force units overseas will be reduced, with a consequent increase in TAC strength in the ZI.

General Weyland said that the TAC rotation program, which calls for six months TDY overseas, has been started at three bases in Europe: Dreux and Chaumont in France and Aviano in Italy.

Programmed to enter the rotational program as the bases become available are Chennévieres, Chalons and Tours in France and Montichiari in Italy.

One squadron of a designated wing will be at these bases all the time. The other two, located in the ZI, will be ready for instant deployment in case of emergency.

GENERAL WEYLAND was asked to outline the four major problems confronting his command. He said that the shortage of skilled manpower "is my worst problem."

He added that the lack of modern tanker aircraft—TAC relies on KB-29's and KB-50's also was creating difficulties.

The general advised the Symington Subcommittee that TAC is concerned because of its "marginal airlift" capacity for intratheater operations. "Our aircraft are good, we think, but the numbers of them are just barely adequate; and in our redeployment phases, I foresee a growing requirement," said General Weyland.

He cited as a fourth major problem the shortage of housing. General Weyland reported that TAC bases are better off in operational facilities than in housing.

AN INTERESTING ASPECT of the TAC testimony was the disclosure that only 12.3 per cent of its 6979 officers are Regulars.

It was noted that prior to assignment of a pilot to TAC, the Air Force has invested 478 days training at a cost of $59,375 in a young pilot, usually an ROTC graduate. TAC spends another $100,000 to get him combat ready.

Latest statistics indicate that only about one out of every four of these officers will continue in Service following completion of his obligated tour of duty.

Major Orr Is Editor

New editor of the Combat Crew magazine, SAC's monthly flying safety publication, is Maj. Wayne P. Orr, USAF, until recently operational plans officer at Castle AFB, Calif. He has a total of 6,200 flying hours and has checked out in the B-50, B-47 and the B-52.

Major Orr replaces Maj. Keith M. Garrison, USAF, who was assigned to OSAF's Office of Information Services in New York City.

Arctic Airlift Passes 5,000 Mark

Planes of MAT's Atlantic Division have completed more than 5000 round trips carrying personnel and equipment to remote arctic military outposts.

This aerial resupply system, began in March 1951 and, originally known as Operation Blue Jay, was made necessary by the construction and operation of Thule AB in northern Greenland. Ships can reach the region only during two summer months.

The Atlantic Division's C-54 and C-124 aircraft began flying the arctic air routes from Westover AFB, Mass. Later, C-54 aircraft based at Grenier AFB, N. H., joined the operation. Since the command of these bases passed from the Atlantic Division last year, C-124 aircraft operating from Dover AFB, Del., have carried out the cargo supplying operation. C-54 aircraft based at Charleston, S. C., have carried passengers from McGuire AFB, N. J., to the Arctic.

Beginning 1 July, C-118 aircraft based at McGuire will take over the passenger-carrying operation.

These aircraft normally fly from their home bases to Goose Bay AB, Labrador, and then to Sondrestrom, Greenland, before proceeding to Thule. Returning, they usually fly directly to Goose Bay from Thule before going on to the U. S.

ECI SETS RECORD

More students enrolled in the Extension Course Institute, Gunter AFB, Ala., last month than during any other single month. New students totaled 12,210.

The Institute has activated its sixth course in the communications-electronics Air Force career area. It is Ground Electronics Officer (#3002), a three-volume course designed to help the student qualify for AFSC 3041.

Applicants for this course must have completed ECI Course 3000 or have had equivalent training or experience. The new course contains practical information on grounds electronics equipment and shows how electronics fundamentals are applied to actual ground radar equipment.

SAC Rodeo Plans

SAC rodeo plans have been completed for this year's numbered air force and command events.

Second Air Force will hold its rodeo 9-11 July at Barksdale AFB, La. Eighth Air Force will conduct its rodeo finals at Westover AFB, Mass., 17-19 July, and the Fifteenth Air Force rodeo will take place at Travis AFB, Cal., the first week in August.

Oscillographs are only one of the many optical, electronic and electro-mechanical devices used by AUTONETICS Flight Test experts to develop and verify the controls that fly and guide today's high-speed aircraft.

Now electronic handwriting records man's actions...his airplane's reactions

Two of the many unpredictable factors in the control of today's high-speed aircraft are the pilot's psychological needs, and the airplane's flexibility in flight.

AUTONETICS Flight Test experts have two major responsibilities...to determine these factors with automatic data recorders; and to verify and perfect electro-mechanical control systems in actual flight, under simulated tactical conditions. Their tools are modern supersonic aircraft, plus complex recording instruments and high-speed motion picture cameras. These produce a simultaneous record—actually "electronic handwriting"—that details the delicate interaction of the pilot, the airplane and its control systems. This record is an important key in the development and testing of better coordinated and more effective controls for supersonic flight.

Flight testing at AUTONETICS is done in hundreds of different ways...in all phases of systems research, design and manufacture. This versatility—plus complete, modern flight test facilities—has made AUTONETICS a key producer of complete electro-mechanical systems—autopilots, autonavigators, armament controls, computers and special products.

How About the Nurses? The White House has released to the press the names and photographs of the three Nurse Corps officers who are giving 'round-the-clock care to President Eisenhower at Walter Reed Army Hospital. They are: Maj. Florence E. Judd, Capt. Lorene F. Miller and Capt. Anna Mae V. McCabe.

We may be sure that this special announcement was motivated not only by a desire to reflect credit and honor to the three nurses who are giving such skilled attention to this most important post-operative patient, but also to re-emphasize to Congress and the country the President's special interest in the careers of Service nurses.

In his State of the Union Message last January, the President advised Congress that he would offer legislation to improve the career outlook for military nurses. Early last month he fulfilled that promise by sending to the legislators a draft measure to lessen the present discrimination in promotions of nurses and medical specialists. Army Secretary Brucker, who is representing the Department of Defense in this action, expressed the President's view when he said that the legislation is essential if the Army, Navy and Air Force are to obtain adequate numbers of Regular nurses and medical specialists.

Under current conditions, the flow of promotion among nurses and specialists in all three Services is impeded by bottlenecks. In some instances, nurses are five years and more behind other officers in eligibility for advancement. Housing and career planning offer further stumbling blocks to the retention of nurses in uniform.

The Armed Services Committees of the Senate and the House have not yet taken up or scheduled the nurse-specialist bill. We hope this further gentle nudging by the Chief Executive will serve as a reminder to them and start this bill off on its legislative path so that it may be enacted into law before this Congress passes into history.

Family Care. Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has assigned a most important task to his Assistant Secretary (Manpower, Personnel and Reserve), Carter L. Burgess, and his Assistant Secretary (Health and Medical), Dr. Frank B. Berry. These two men, who were largely responsible for the development of the newly enacted Family Medical Care Act, have been told to do everything that is possible to put that law into effect without delay.

It is a complicated Act and will require a great deal of study and interservice conferring before final policies and regulations can be put before Secretary Wilson for approval.

The urgency of Mr. Wilson's directive to his aides is reflected in his statement that the new law "constitutes a new milestone in our efforts to assure the individual serviceman the peace of mind and adequacy of opportunity that is essential if we are to attract and retain in the military services the caliber of personnel that the maintenance of National Defense in this modern era requires."

THE JOURNAL, as do the thousands of families in the Services, looks forward to the promulgation of final plans for making the new law effective. As soon as they are formulated THE JOURNAL will print them for the immediate information of all concerned.

Survivor Benefits. It seems assured now that the Senate will act at last upon the Survivor Benefits bill passed by the House last year. The measure has been reported out, with some changes, (see story on first page of this issue) and members of the Senate Finance Committee are confident that it will come up on the floor late next week or early in July. Such prompt action would be necessary to assure conference consideration of the Senate amendments before the bill is caught in the usual legislative jam that piles up in election years when members are hurrying to get away before the political conventions.

One amendment put on the bill by the Senate Committee was just half way good. The $10,000 free life insurance had been abolished in the measure as passed by the House, but the Senate Committee voted that it be restored—but only in time of war. If it is to be restored at all it should be for peace as well as war. Certainly the surviving members of a Service man's family are just as bereft and just as much in need of help in peace as they would be in war.

The Senate group also voted to confine the benefits to the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force and Coast Guard and to delete the Public Health Service and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. These two latter services are small in number as compared with the Armed Forces; furthermore their pay and most of their collateral benefits are incorporated in the strictly military bills. It seems unfair now to send them on their own independent way by barring their survivors from the benefits to be established.

We hope the Senate acts quickly and that the conferees iron out the differences promptly. Its enactment will go far to raise morale, improve career attractiveness, and thus increase the efficiency of our National Defense.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Rejecting the Senate's effort to confine pay increases to enlisted grades, the conferees on the draft and pay bills have recommended enactment of the House pay bill granting increases graduated from 50 per cent in the lowest enlisted rank to 10 per cent in the highest commissioned grade.

50 Years Ago—While there is no likelihood of any legislation during the present session of Congress looking to the creation of the Army reserve so earnestly desired by the military authorities, the widespread discussion of the subject in the last year indicates a growing sentiment in favor of the project which encourages the hope that it may be adopted at a session not far distant.

90 Years Ago—The importance of a uniform calibre for each arm of the service is universally conceded, but in regard to what such calibre should be, there is not an entire unanimity of opinion. Between .45-inch and .58-inch there is much to be said before either extreme, or even a medium, can be adopted. It is plain, however, that the smallest possible calibre which will secure satisfactory results in regard to range, accuracy, and effect should be selected.

PL 810 Retirements

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Much has been said and written on the virtues and fallacies of the current retirement law, PL 810. Good or bad, it is the best retirement law the service has had thus far. Many fine articles have appeared in THE JOURNAL on this subject, however, there is always another situation that has not been written about.

In spite of the apparent fairness of the law, I am one of a minority group who have not been fortunate enough to take advantage of it. This group, in fact, are penalized by it. I have had much correspondence with the Department of Army on my own case and in summary it appears very obvious that the unfairness insofar as this category of personnel (estimate 2000 in the services) is concerned, has been brought about by the failure of those responsible to consider this group when the bill was drafted.

I should like to bring this matter to your attention because THE JOURNAL has done much in the past to bring about corrective legislation and changes in Department of Army policy in areas where action through official channels has proved fruitless.

The case I shall present is my own, however I have personal knowledge of some 50 persons in this category and as I mentioned above, it is estimated that there are some 2000 involved. The situation is this:

My case—Serviceman has completed 20 years' continuous active service; is a former permanent Master Sergeant; is now on active duty as a Reserve Officer (Captain) and has satisfactorily served consecutively on active duty as follows:

Enlisted Man—7 years.
Warrant Officer, AUS—9 years.
Officer, USAR—4 years.

Retirement grade for the above man, based on the present law and according to DA is Master Sergeant.

Now, let's consider this case: Serviceman has completed 20 years' continuous active service; is a former permanent Master Sergeant; is now on active duty as a Reserve (non-regular) Warrant Officer and has satisfactorily served consecutively on active duty as follows:

Enlisted Man—19 years.
Warrant Officer—1 year.

Retirement grade for the above man, based on the present law and according to DA is Warrant Officer. Matter of fact, he need only hold the Warrant grade for 30 days to be eligible for this grade upon retirement.

There is something radically wrong when a man who has not only served as a Warrant Officer for some 9 years but who also served as a Commissioned Officer for 4 years must revert to an enlisted grade for retirement. Meanwhile there are many Warrant Officers retiring as WO's who have far less service in that grade than I have. Further, these men have never served on duty as Commissioned Officers. The individuals involved in this unfortunate situation are those men who were serving on active duty as AUS Warrant Officers in 1951 and were called to duty as officers to fill the critical shortage created by the Korean situation. Now, because we do not have the required 10 years' commissioned service as required by PL 810, and are not on duty as WO's (can't revert thereto because we were not regulars) must retire as an EM at a loss of some $100 monthly. Meanwhile, with the squeeze on money, it is extremely doubtful if one could expect to remain on AD until 1961 and complete the required 10 years.

To correct this situation and to present fairness to all concerned I believe that Title II should be amended to permit former Warrant Officers who were called to AD as Commissioned Officers from that grade (in my case, involuntarily) to count their warrant time in computing the required 10 years' commissioned service for retirement purposes. If this cannot be done, then I believe that these individuals should be given an opportunity to revert to a warrant grade somewhat commensurate with their present commissioned pay status for retirement purposes. Legislation of course would be necessary to amend Title II, however I believe DA has the authority to effect the latter but refuse to do so, at least they have refused in my case.

THE NEXT MEETING of the Cordiner Committee on military pay has been set for 29 June. Before that Asst SecDef Burgess and his aides will have drawn up an organizational chart for the group's work. The task will be to confine the area of study within manageable limits. SecDef Wilson has said he wants the group not only to look into the problem of pay but also to recommend other personnel actions for improving career attractiveness such as increased assignment stability.

A LEGISLATIVE SKIRMISH has broken out between SecDef Wilson and Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee. Mr. Wilson wants an additional Assistant Secretary for each of the Services. He would like to see this accomplished by the Reorganization Plan device, which would automatically become law if no action were taken before adjournment. BUT CHAIRMAN VINSON, who has had his fair share of tactical experience on Capitol Hill, maintains the Pentagon should not be allowed to employ this flanking maneuver. He wants Congress to vote approval of a Joint Resolution which would force Mr. Wilson to submit the plan for additional Assistant Secretaries as proposed legislation, just like any other bill. THIS WOULD MEAN, of course, that the measure would come before Mr. Vinson's committee for hearings. The Chairman and his colleagues would be certain to question why Mr. Wilson now wants an Assistant Secretary for R&D in each of the Services, but was not in favor of this when Committee members suggested such a designation two years ago. BUT THE POINT REMAINS that Congress must take action, either by rejecting the Reorganization Plan or by approving Mr. Vinson's resolution, or else SecDef Wilson's proposal automatically goes into effect. Best bet: Chairman Vinson will be the victor.

GENERAL LEMAY OF SAC wasted little time last week in making it known that it was not one of his crews which missed the target with the recent hydrogen bomb drop in the Pacific. It was an ARDC crew. In Washington, Sec'y Quarles gave out this explanation: "Due to a human error, the recent thermonuclear bomb dropped by a B-52 aircraft at Bikini exploded somewhat less than four miles short of the planned position. The error was in the manipulation of the bombing equipment and did not involve malfunction of the aircraft or any of the equipment which it carried. While the error was considerably more than expected, it was not great enough to have a serious effect on the success of the experiment." THERE WAS WIDE BELIEF in the Air Force that the story of the bombing difficulty, which broke in Honolulu, could be traced to sources outside the Air Force, many suspect the Navy.

THE SERVICES WILL BE DISAPPOINTED if legislation authorizing reduced rentals for about 30,000 families occupying substandard government-owned quarters is sidetracked again this year on Capitol Hill. President Eisenhower in January asked for remedial action. THE BILL WON AN O.K. from the House Armed Services Committee, but has not come up for a vote. Assistant Navy Secretary Pratt, who has been working hard for relief from what he calls an "outrageous practice" of charging full rentals for dilapidated quarters, has pledged that the fight will be resumed next year, if necessary.

MODERN NAVY COMPLEXITY is pointed up in a new compilation which shows 180 different ship and vessel designs, broken down into 11 major classifications. The Navy has two types of warships, six cruisers, two command ships, five aircraft carriers, seven destroyers, 18 amphibious warfare, 12 mine warfare, 11 patrol, five submarine, 66 service craft and 46 types of auxiliary vessels.

THE SENATE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE has "directed" the Defense Department to "make a study relative to the cost and feasibility of air conditioning the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda and report to the Committee as soon as practicable." It's noteworthy that many Congressmen have been patients at NNMHC during recent years; the Committee made no companion recommendation for Walter Reed Army Hospital, where the President has been a patient.

POWERFUL DOCUMENTATION on the military manpower problem is being laid before the Symington Committee by Air Force leaders; their forceful presentations now make certain a strong recommendation in the forthcoming Airpower Report that immediate action be taken to check the loss of technicians and specialists—including a pay raise. On the heels of urgent testimony on this problem by Generals LeMay and Partridge of SAC and CONAD, General Weyland of TAC scored impressively with a disclosure that his pilots are unable to achieve proper flying training levels because of maintenance difficulties. THE TAC CHIEF EXPLAINED that his pilots should get in about 25 hours per month, instead of the 12-15 hours currently being recorded. It's not a shortage of airplanes that causes the cutback, he stressed. What hurts is the lack of maintenance people.

GENERAL WEYLAND'S SENATE TESTIMONY was noteworthy also for his insistence that TAC not be considered in any second echelon role, particularly in comparison to SAC. "I believe very thoroughly that any fighting that we may get into in the foreseeable future will very probably be of the peripheral war type, which involves tactical air forces predominantly," General Weyland asserted, "so I feel we should be very much just as ready as any other segment of the Air Force." UNDER QUESTIONING, however, he conceded that overall SAC is more combat ready than any other AF command.

THE WINDUP OF SENATE AIRPOWER HEARINGS will disclose a record of testimony that if nothing else will refute charges that military leaders are being gagged in expressing individual viewpoints which may be at odds with official Defense Department positions. SECDEF WILSON HAS GIVEN Air Force leaders considerable leeway in stating their opinions, though he will insist, of course, that they give complete support to implementing the programs approved by their superiors. TYPICAL OF THE TESTIMONY were the assertions of Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt, USAF, DCoFS, Development, made public this week. He declared that the Air Force was not getting enough funds—less than half of what was desired—for development of a successor to the B-52. FOR NUCLEAR PLANE development, General Putt's testimony showed that the Air Force is getting $20 million, only about a sixth of what was asked. His testimony, like that of other AF witnesses, is providing hard-hitting material for the Committee's final report.

that USAA has long been the choice of the Armed Forces

Organized 34 years ago to provide low-cost automobile insurance for officers and warrant officers of the armed forces, United Services Automobile Association is a non-profit organization under the management of active and retired service officers.

The policy of insuring only preferred risks, plus responsible management, has provided substantial savings and has made USAA truly the choice of the services.

In 1955 over seven million dollars of dividends were paid in the states to 262,161 members, amounting to an average saving of 44% of the standard manual premiums on automobiles.

Wherever you serve, USAA can serve you. Claims are settled rapidly, also—even in the most remote places.

Give yourself the most responsible protection for the least cost. Just fill in coupon, mail and be insured today—with USAA.

93d Bomb Wing Celebrates Anniversary of B-52 Conversion — "A Year to Remember"

CASTLE AFB
MERCED, CALIF.

PERSONNEL of this Strategic Air Command base in the San Joaquin Valley are preparing to celebrate "A Year to Remember"—a year that began 29 June 1955 with the delivery to the 93d Bombardment Wing of its first B-52 Stratofortress, and has seen the wing completely changed over to the eight-jet bombers.

Today the 93d, the first wing to get B-52s, not only is rated as "combat ready" with the giant bombers but is also engaged in a training program teaching other SAC crews to operate them.

Conversion is not exactly a new experience to the 93d Bomb Wing. After World War II, the 93d, then a squadron, dropped to a "paper" organization—in fact in September 1946 it consisted of one officer and one airman. In 1947 it was reorganized here at Castle as a unit of the 15th Air Force and equipped with B-29s. Later it converted to B-50s. In May of 1954 it was converted to jet B-47s. While this latter program was still in progress, wing planning agencies were preparing the way for the next conversion to B-52 aircraft.

The anniversary, a most important day to every officer, airman and family on the base, will be celebrated Friday, 29 June, with a "B-52 First Anniversary Ball," a military formal affair.

COMMANDING THE 93d is Brig. Gen. William E. Eubank, Jr., USAF, who began his military career as a Flying Cadet at Randolph and Kelly Field in 1936. He became commander of the 91st Bomb Squadron at Clark Field, Philippine Islands, in November 1941. After Pearl Harbor he moved his squadron to Bataan Peninsula where it served as a provisional infantry company. The General was evacuated by submarine to Java and after Java fell he flew to India as part of General Breton's staff to form the 10th Air Force. He served with the 10th until 1943 when he returned to the States.

General Eubank's service with SAC began in February 1948 when he became commander of the 43d Bomb Group, Tucson, Ariz. After other SAC assignments he was named to command the 93d here at Castle in July 1953. He has commanded through the conversion to B-47s and B-52s. The conversion to jet bombers was effected in record time and won for the wing the personal commendation of General Curtis E. LeMay, SAC's Cinc.

Castle, besides being the home of the 93d Bomb Wing, is also the home of the 2d Strategic Support Squadron and the 4017th Combat Crew Training Squadron.

The 4017th CCTS is an integral part of the 93d wing and is the unit responsible for the training of all B-52 Combat Crews for all Strategic Air Command B-52 wings. The 4017th is commanded by Col. William R. Smith, USAF.

THE TRAINING PROGRAM and the organization of the 4017th CCTS was decided upon some years ago at the same time the 93d was picked for conversion. Instructor crew personnel of the unit received their B-52 checkout training at Edwards AFB in early 1955 while the Air Force Flight Test Center was conducting Phase VI Evaluation tests on the B-52.

BRIG. GEN. WILLIAM E. EUBANK, JR., USAF, 93d Bombardment Wing Commander, right, congratulates M/Sgt. Clarence J. Fields, 329th crew chief at Castle AFB, Calif. Sergeant Fields recently saw his B-52, No. 710, complete 500 flying hours, the first operational B-52 to do so.

"The overall programming plan for the conversion of the 93d Bombardment Wing," General Eubank said, "included the requirement for the 4017th CCTS instructor personnel to receive their preliminary training at Edwards AFB, and in so doing support the needs of the Flight Test Center for flight personnel to conduct their testing operations."

"Maintenance personnel of the 93d, more than 200 in all, also supported the testing phase at Edwards and by this means received invaluable maintenance training in supporting actual B-52 flight operations. With such background for key flight instructor personnel and maintenance personnel, the 93d Bomb Wing was fully ready for the influx of B-52 aircraft when it began."

GENERAL EUBANK POINTED OUT that "Today the mission of the 93d Bombardment Wing is to maintain a state of combat readiness at all times to support the war mission of the unit in the Strategic Air Command emergency war plan, and also to support the 4017th CCTS in the training of combat crews for all succeeding B-52 wings."

In response to the question as to "why hasn't this training responsibility been assigned to the Air Training Command as it was in the B-47 program?", General Eubank stated:

"It was desired to make B-52 aircraft available within SAC for combat purposes include also the aircraft utilized for crew training. The 4017th utilizes the 93d's combat aircraft for this training. In other words, it was not necessary to decrease the Strategic Air Command inventory of combat aircraft to support the training function."

"The 4017th is an Operations and Training Squadron only, and it does not possess any unit aircraft whatsoever. The aircraft belong to the three bomb squadrons and are maintained by these units. Training sorties are furnished to the 4017th to fulfill the requirements of the training function of that unit."

General Eubank explained to visiting members of the Aviation Writers' Association, while the B-52 is similar in appearance to the B-47, there are many radical differences. One obvious difference, he said, is the side by side pilot configuration in the B-52 as compared with the tandem seating in the B-47.

"Experience on the B-47," he said, "had indicated that side by side seating would improve crew coordination and afford more space."

ANOTHER INNOVATION, he said, is the use in the B-52 of high pressure bleed air from the engines as a source of power.

"In the engine starting system, for example," he pointed out, "a small jet type engine on a cart must be utilized to afford a source of high pressure air to start two of the eight jet engines. When two of the engines have been started, the bleed air from the internal source can then be used to start the remaining engines."

Bleed air affords power also for the hydraulic power packs, alternator packs, and the anti-icing system.

Also, whereas the B-47 has all boost operated control surfaces, the B-52 was designed with manually controlled elevator, rudders and ailerons. The only power operated control surfaces are the spoilers on the upper surfaces of each wing which work in conjunction with the ailerons to provide greater lateral control.

B-52s are now under production at both the Seattle, Wash., and the Wichita, Kans., plants of the Boeing Airplane Co.

CONSTRUCTION WORK began at Castle in March 1954 looking toward the arrival of the new heavy aircraft. The main runway was strengthened and lengthened to 11,800 feet and width extended to 300 feet. Many new buildings were constructed. Only construction remaining in progress in the operating area is the project for the post-flight and periodic inspection docks. These docks, costing $250,000 each, simplify the maintenance problem in that the aircraft can be nosed into the dock and all major components and accessories are completely available for maintenance.

Speaking of the B-52, General Eubank says, "Never before in history has so much striking power been concentrated in one weapon. There's no question in my mind but that it is also the greatest weapon for peace today, in that our enemies know we possess the capability to deliver such destruction with terrifying effectiveness. The Strategic Air Command B-52 force, which is growing rapidly day by day, could and should assure the peace of the world through the next decade."

Human Factors Section Keeps Sharp Eye On SAC Air Crews' Safety and Comfort

CASTLE AFB,
MERCED, CALIF.

NEWEST tenant on this base is SAC's own Human Factors Operational Engineering Section which moved here from MacDill AFB, Fla.

The Section is part of the Requirements Division, Directorate of Operations, Hq SAC, and consists of three units: Personal Equipment, Electronics, and Crew Comfort.

LT. COL. EARL W. UDICK, USAF, is Chief of the Section which originally was established 1 July 1954 as the Command central agency through which equipment field tests and surveys could be established and monitored, results consolidated and evaluated, and Specific Item Reports prepared which, after coordination within the Headquarters, would clearly indicate SAC opinion on personal equipment matters.

Its purpose is to conduct operational studies and suitability tests on current and new aircraft personal equipment and allied aircraft systems related to the safety, efficiency, and comfort of aircrew members as affects mission accomplishment; to attend all mock-up board meetings concerning aircraft programmed for SAC and all other meetings and conferences pertaining to personal equipment and crew comfort which in any way affect SAC combat crews.

An exhibit of equipment developed by the Section was shown members of the Aviation Writers Association during their recent visit to this Base.

All individuals and organizations have been advised of Section's organization and told that problems and recommendations within its scope should be forwarded to it for consideration and action.

ITEMS OF EQUIPMENT such as the following come under the purview of the Human Factors OES:

- Exposure Suits.
- Personal Flotation Gear.
- Life Rafts.
- Partial and Full Pressure Suits.
- Survival Kits and Components Thereof.

Navy Establishes New

EM Evaluation Rules

The Navy has devised a new method of evaluating the performance of enlisted men, chief objective is to distinguish between "outstanding and excellent" and "average" EM when advancement time rolls around.

The revised system includes a "performance factor" which will "enhance the advancement potential and morale of those personnel who have proven their ability through demonstrated excellence," the Navy explained.

The evaluation system also will be used in choosing men for assignment to billets where high levels of ability or particular qualities are needed.

A detailed explanation is in BuPers Instruction 1,616.4 of 22 May.

Defense Department Summarizes Services' Progress In Field Of Guided Missiles

THE Defense Department has released an official fact sheet telling of the work that is being done by each of the Services in the field of guided missiles. Within the limits of security regulations, this document tells the story of current guided missile activity in the Armed Forces. Its publication comes at a time when missiles have become a source of considerable controversy.

ARMY

During the closing days of WWII, in a race against time and a Russian advance toward Hitler's rocket laboratories, US Army troops rounded up 120 German scientists and 100 V-2 rockets for evacuation to the United States. On 16 April, 1946, the first American-fired V-2 rocket shot into the air above the New Mexico desert at the Army's White Sands Proving Ground to initiate the practical phases of what has become an intensive Army program in the field of rockets and guided missiles.

By 24 Feb. 1949 Army scientists had combined the V-2 rocket and an experimental liquid fuel, high-altitude rocket known as the WAC Corporal. This two stage rocket, nicknamed "Bumper," attained the highest altitude ever reached by any man-made object—250 miles up and travelling at a speed of 5000 miles an hour. Developments by the Army in this new field have come rapidly.

NIKE, named after the Greek goddess of victory, is the Army's first supersonic antiaircraft guided missile designed to intercept and destroy the enemy target regardless of evasive action. NIKE guided missile installations are now deployed throughout the United States as an inner ring of defense for industrial, highly populated and strategic areas.

NIKE is a liquid-fueled supersonic antiaircraft missile about 20 feet long and about one foot in diameter, with two sets of fins for guidance and steering. The missile and booster weigh more than one ton. Speed, range, altitude and lethality of NIKE are classified.

Fired from an almost vertical position, NIKE can meet an attack from any direction and its kill potential has far exceeded expectations. There are eight launchers in each NIKE battery, which is operated by approximately 100 officers and men. Personnel are trained at the Antiaircraft and Guided Missile School, Fort Bliss, Texas. In improving NIKE, the Army has anticipated the capabilities of higher performance aircraft. An improved NIKE B, will be more than capable of dealing with such aircraft when it becomes operational.

CORPORAL, equipped with either an atomic or conventional type warhead, the CORPORAL is capable of engaging tactical targets far beyond the ranges of artillery or the new 280mm gun. The weapon gives the field commander great fire-power on the battlefield and enables him to strike selected targets deep in enemy rear areas. CORPORAL follows a ballistic trajectory in its flight to the target. Weather and visibility conditions place no restriction on the use of the weapon. Motive power is supplied by a powerful rocket motor. The missile travels through space at several times the speed of sound. A CORPORAL battalion has 250 men. Each battalion has two batteries—a firing battery and a service battery. There are three launchers to a battalion. CORPORAL battalions have been deployed to Europe.

REDSTONE MISSILE. Activation of the first U. S. Army unit to fire the Army's REDSTONE missile was announced on 14 March, 1956. The Army uses surface-to-surface artillery missile units armed with REDSTONE and other Army missiles to extend and supplement the range and firepower of artillery cannon. REDSTONE is the largest surface-to-surface ballistic guided missile successfully fired in this country. Named for the place of its development, the Army's Redstone Arsenal at Huntsville, Alabama, it is a future operational field missile and at the same time, a basic "step" toward the JUPITER, the intermediate range ballistic missile capable of being launched from on land or aboard ship which the new Army Ballistic Missile Agency was set up to develop under high priority early in 1956. The REDSTONE was developed under supervision of Dr. Werner von Braun, developer of the German V-2 Rocket.

PETREL was developed under technical direction of the Bureau of Ordnance by the National Bureau of Standards, primarily for use against enemy ships at sea. Launched by patrol aircraft well outside the range of the target's air defense, the missile attacks at high speed, saving the plane pilot from anti-aircraft hazards of World War II. The engineering production phase was coordinated by the Naval Ordnance Experimental Unit, a field activity of the Bureau of Ordnance located at the Bureau of Standards, with the production contractor, Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation. A number of patrol type aircraft are equipped with PETREL. (Announced 3 April, 1956, Department of Defense release No. 288-56.)

ONLY AUTOMATIC GCA PROVIDES

FAIL-SAFE

High density final Approach
Closed loop protection
Automatic overtake warning

Automatic Ground Control Approach is an accessory to a basic GCA Radar system, and is capable of handling six aircraft on final approach at 30-second intervals; or at a landing rate of 120 aircraft per hour in a continuous stream.

AGCA consists of a basic GCA Radar equipment, and a six tracking channel computer and coder on the field. It utilizes standard USAF and US Navy airborne telemetering equipment to feed the traffic control data directly to the aircraft autopilot and airborne instruments.

AGCA replaces six GCA operators, and relieves the pilot of the manual chore of making right-left and up-down aircraft corrections during final approach to the runway.

CONTINUOUS AIRBORNE DATA Automatic GCA also provides the pilot with continuous azimuth and elevation position information on an airborne crosspointer meter and continuous distance from touchdown information on an airborne DME-type indicator. This airborne data enables the pilot to monitor the Automatic Ground Controlled Approach, or to fly the approach manually.

Test Center, Point Mugu, Calif., and the Sperry Gyroscope Company. Described as a powerful deterrent against attack by jet bombers and fighters, it is about 12 feet long, weighs about 300 pounds, and is powered by a solid propellant rocket motor. Guidance signals deflect the missile's wings and direct it to intercept the target, even under evasive action. The SPARROW I weapons system is versatile, permitting effective attacks against high and low altitude targets flying singly or in groups. The missile is in production at the Sperry Farragut Company in Bristol, Tenn. Operational in the Fleet and shore-based aircraft.

REGULUS, which resembles a conventional swept-wing jet fighter about 30 feet long, was developed by the Chance Vought Aircraft Company under the sponsorship of the Bureau of Aeronautics. It was designed for launching from submarines, surface ships and shore bases. The launching equipment can be installed in a short period of time on several types of vessels at relatively low cost, with only slight modification to the ship itself. Tactically, it will be used against appropriate land targets and in amphibious warfare by the Marine Corps and the Navy. Although the assault missile and certain other configurations will employ a drone version of REGULUS, tactical employment will also include those techniques and guidance systems associated with the operation of all-weather, remotely controlled guided missiles. Such plans will make it possible to utilize the missile in various ways without the expense and effort of designing and procuring a separate missile for each function. REGULUS is now in production at Chance Vought's Dallas, Texas, plant. The program was started in 1947. The missile was initially developed in 1948, first flown at Edwards Air Force Base in 1950.

TERRIER was fired experimentally in fleet operations in November 1954 from the Navy's oldest battleship, USS MISSISSIPPI, which was converted into a test ship for this purpose. The missile was successfully demonstrated in the 1954 Operation LANTFLEX. A slim, needle-nosed supersonic weapon, the TERRIER is designed to intercept aircraft at longer range and higher altitudes than conventional anti-aircraft guns, and under any weather conditions. Developed by the Bureau of Ordnance under technical direction of the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory, Silver Spring, Maryland, it is being produced in quantity at the Naval Industrial Reserve Ordnance Plant, Pomona, California operated by Convair, a division of General Dynamics Corporation.

TALOS, a supersonic guided missile for use in the air defense of the United States, is being developed by the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory, Silver Spring, Maryland, under contract to the Navy's Bureau of Ordnance, prime contractor being Bendix Aviation Corporation. It will be employed by the Navy aboard ship and by the Continental Air Defense Command. Air Force survey teams will make a study of prospective sites in the continental United States, to be manned by trained Air Force guided missile technicians. Built-in safety features make accidental detonation almost an impossibility. Dimensions of the sites will provide more than adequate safety zones. Rear Admiral John H. Sides, in answer to press queries said, "TALOS . . . larger size than TERRIER . . . and has longer range . . ."

TARTAR. In an open press conference on March 13, 1956, aboard the guided missile cruiser USS BOSTON, Rear Admiral John H. Sides, answering direct press queries, said: "TARTAR will be small enough to go into destroyers and the secondary batteries of large ships, yet have more performance than the original TERRIER. . . destroyers are to be designed to carry the missile . . . it can replace five-inch mounts . . . a solid propellant rocket . . . Admiral A. A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, said, "TARTAR should be cheaper than TERRIER." No other information has been released.

AIR FORCE

MATADOR (TM-61A), tactical missile of subsonic speed, is manufactured by Martin Company of Baltimore. It received its first flight in December 1950 and was operational March 1954. It has a wingspan of 28.7 feet, length of 39.6 feet. Ground launched by a rocket booster from a roadable launcher, it is powered by an Allison jet engine (J-33-A-37), controlled electronically in flight by ground personnel, and is capable of delivering conventional or nuclear weapons several hundred miles. MATADOR squadrons are already stationed in Germany and Orlando, Fla. A later version, the TM-61B, is longer and faster and has greater range and improved guidance system. It has been tested in successful launchings at Holloman Air Development Center, New Mexico.

FALCON (GAR-1) is a guided aircraft rocket of supersonic speed, manu-

Automatic GCA plugs into present basic GCA Radar system, transmits control data to standard USAF and US Navy airborne telemetering equipment, which activates autopilot to bring aircraft down correct approach path automatically.

ALL THREE TYPES OF CONTROL AGCA therefore provides three types of control for all types of aircraft in the same stream of landing traffic:

1. Complete Automatic GCA control OR
2. Complete data to pilot for manual approach OR
3. Regular GCA talkdown.

RADC/GILFILLAN DEVELOPMENT AGCA is now in production after nine years of joint research and development work by the laboratories of the USAF's Rome Air Development Center and Gilfillan.

AGCA has been thoroughly flight-checked with several thousand actual controlled approaches of all types of piston and jet aircraft.

Safety features of AGCA include: continuous closed loop protection, eliminating the serious time lapse of open loop systems; automatic overtake warning; automatic warning of excessive azimuth and elevation error; automatic monitor of all approaches; instant simplified override features; continuous semi-private line communication with each aircraft; automatic warning of any malfunction of all ground and airborne electronic and mechanical equipment, and automatic self-alignment of the electronic system.

SIMPLIFIED MAINTENANCE SYSTEM AGCA features unitized construction of both ground and airborne equipment and simplified maintenance.

AGCA is fully compatible with both existing and future navigational systems, including those currently in design and development.

factured by Hughes Aircraft Company. Under development since 1947, it was test fired in 1950. Production was ordered in 1955 and it became operational in March, 1956. FALCON which weighs slightly over 100 pounds and is approximately six feet long, is powered by solid rocket propellant and electronically fired and guided. Designed for under wing or pod installation, it can be carried in quantity by interceptor aircraft, launched miles from target, and automatically "homes" on target. During test period, it knocked down target planes without carrying explosive warhead.

SNARK (SN-62), long-range strategic missile, is manufactured by Northrop Aircraft, Inc., and is undergoing tests at the Air Force Missile Test Center, Patrick Air Force Base, Florida. It is a winged pilotless bomber powered by an Allison turbo-jet engine, and is the first U. S. long-range missile to be test flown. It is considered to have range, accuracy and load carrying capabilities as good as ballistic missile types.

NAVAHO (SM-64), long-range strategic missile, manufactured by North American Aviation, Inc., is now undergoing tests at Patrick Air Force Base. Original flight tests were made at Edwards Air Force Base, California. A rocket-launched, air-breathing missile, it is considered to have range, accuracy and load carrying capabilities as good as ballistic missile types.

RASCAL (TAM-63), long-range guided missile under development by Bell Aircraft Corporation, is a rocket-powered pilotless bomber designed to be carried by strategic bombers and released miles from objective to proceed at high speed to target.

BOMARC (FM-99), long-range interceptor guided missile of supersonic speed, is under development by Boeing Airplane Company. Successful experimental launchings at Patrick AFB are now a regular part of the development program. A pilotless guided missile powered by Marquardt engine, it is launched from the ground and designed to seek out and destroy enemy aircraft at great distances from its launching site.

INTERCONTINENTAL BALLISTIC MISSILES include the ATLAS and TITAN ICBM. Convair Division of General Dynamics Corporation received a development contract for airframe and

Army War College Graduates Hear Warning

Under Secretary of the Army Charles C. Finucane cautioned recently that "we cannot disregard the stubborn fact that the tremendous might of the largest mobilized military forces in the world is behind the Communist conspiracy."

In a speech 14 June before the graduating class at the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., Secretary Finucane declared:

"Certainly this is no time for Americans to let down their guard. As long as the Iron Curtain conceals the true situation in Russia and Red China, there can be no safety in trusting the lives of our people to the doubtful meaning of mere words and smiles . . ."

The sixth graduating class since the College reopened in 1950 consisted of 200 Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps officers of the rank of lieutenant colonel, and civilian representatives of the State Department and other government agencies.

A list of graduates follows:

Naval War College Told Career Progress

New laws and improved personnel administration have helped to double Navy reenlistment rates in the last 18 months and slowed down the number of officer resignations, according to Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Personnel and Reserve Forces, Albert Pratt. Applications by Reserve officers for transfer to the Regular Navy also are increasing, he said in a speech before the graduating class of the Naval War College at Newport, R. I., on 13 June.

Secretary Pratt reviewed some of the steps which have been taken to make service careers more attractive and said a plan is now being studied which would place the whole housing program in the hands of one Assistant Secretary so that more attention could be devoted to it.

Graduates include 214 Naval, 14 Marine, 16 Army, and 10 Air Force officers, one from the Coast Guard, and two from national civilian agencies. Of the graduates 72 are from the Course in Naval Warfare I; 60 from the Course in Naval Warfare II; 124 from the Command and Staff Course; and one from the Advanced Studies Group.

VADM. Lynde D. McCormick, USN, President of the War College, presided at the graduation ceremonies and introduced Secretary Pratt. The ceremonies opened with an invocation by Capt. A. Peterson, (ChC), USN.

USN Sets-Up Seminars For All A/D Chaplains

The Navy has set up a program of of seminar training in professional subjects for active duty chaplains.

The first seminar on Catholic Homiletics (a refresher course in the art of preaching) will be held at 5th Naval District Headquarters from 13-17 and from 20-24 August and will be conducted by the Rev. Alfred Duffy, C. P. of St. Michael's Passionist Missionary, Union City, N. J.

The Protestant Homiletics seminar will be held from 10-14 and 17-21 September and will be led by Dr. David A. MacLennan, seminar minister of the Brick Presbyterian Church, Rochester, N. Y.

The second group of seminars will be on personal counseling. Both Catholic and Protestant courses will be held at 11th Naval District Headquarters 13-17 and 20-24 August. The Catholic seminar will be conducted by Rev. James Vander-Veldt, Ph.D. Professor in the Department of Psychology and Psychiatry at Catholic University, Washington, D. C. Dr. Robert G. Foster, Ph.D., Director of the Marriage Counseling Service and Training Program in the Menninger Foundation's Department of Social Applications, Topeka, Kan., will lead the Protestant seminar.

All chaplains within commuting distance of the seminars, the Navy said, are expected to attend, including chaplains with fleet units in port. The courses are being repeated, it was explained, so that local commands will be able to retain the services of half their chaplains during the seminar period.

West Coast Is Popular

The demand for West Coast shore duty from commanders and lieutenant commanders exceeds the available number of billets.

The majority of these requests, the Bureau of Personnel says, are from officers who plan to retire. As a result of the excessive number of requests, the Navy has found it necessary to shorten many West Coast assignments to less than normal three year tours so that officers serve the first half of a shore duty tour in other areas.

Preference for West Coast duty is being given to officers who are completing 30 years as opposed to those who plan to retire on less. In addition, the Bureau is giving priority to officers who have not had recent West Coast assignments.

Duty requests received by the Bureau show that the most popular retirement and preretirement areas are west of the Rockies and south of the Mason-Dixon Line.

The San Diego-Long Beach area of California is the most popular.

To transform the setting into a visit to faraway places, the corners of the ballroom had gardens from the four corners of the world. Mrs. Dudley D. Hale, chairman of the affair, constructed a French garden, circled with boxwood and yew trees enclosed by a low rock wall. Mrs. Thomas E. Moorman, co-chairman, featured a Japanese interior scene with its garden containing a pool and a typical bent pine tree. Mrs. Howard E. Kreidler's South American jungle held

TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE

Under Secretary Charles C. Finucane took the occasion of his graduation address at the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., on 14 June to pay high tribute to the role of the Service wife.

He said he would leave the College "with a guilty conscience if I would not take time to pay tribute to one of the great sources of spiritual strength and support to every soldier—although not appearing in any TO&E, I am speaking—officers of the graduating class—of your wives and families."

Mr. Finucane told the wives that they were a "significant factor" in the military careers of their husbands. PRESIDENT'S GIFTS AT LOWRY NURSERY

LOWRY AFB, COLO.—A large collection of toys donated by President Eisenhower featured the recent opening of a new Base Nursery here. Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John T. Sprague, USAF, were present to cut the ribbon.

President Eisenhower gave the toys to the Nursery last summer when, for the third time, Lowry served as his "Summer White House." He had received them from various toy manufacturers and turned them over to Lowry and Fitzsimons Army Hospitals. The Lowry Nursery Council decided to save the toys until the new Nursery was ready for occupancy.

The Base Nursery Council, headed by Maj. Robert E. Finley, USAF, planned the Nursery and supervised its development. Many groups contributed generously of their time and financial assistance. The "Wife Life," newspaper of the Officers' Wives' Club, donated a motion picture projector and screen, the NCO Wives' Club donated a record player with high-fidelity amplifying system and Sears, Roebuck and Company of Denver presented the Nursery with a television set.

Among the many improvements that give Lowry personnel cause for pride are: a complete rewiring of the Nursery building, a thorough renovation of the plumbing, an automatic dishwasher and disposal, an automatic washer and dryer, a separate room with 30 cribs for infants, an "isolation room" for any child who becomes ill, and a completely appointed kitchen with a 30-inch oven and ample supply of dishes and silverware.

There is also an outside play area, connected to the building by rubber-covered ramps rather than stairs, thereby reducing the hazard of falls. This area is divided so that very young children are separated from the older ones to prevent possible inadvertent injuries. The play yard is equipped with slides, sand boxes, a merry-go-round and many other attractions for the youngsters.

Another source of satisfaction to the people at Lowry is that the new Nursery is completely paid for—through the generosity of numerous groups and the efforts of the Nursery Council.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

BRIG. GEN. J. S. HOLTNER, USAF, Commander Edwards AFB looks over Convair rain erosion test rocket sled prior to record breaking 1560 mile per hour run at Experimental Track Branch in the Mojave Desert. In center is Robert King, Air Force supervisor of 10,000-foot rocket track. At right is Roy Holmes, Convair thermodynamics engineer who helped design the radical sled. A series of runs above Mach 2 are planned in the next few weeks in an overall engineering program by Convair.

Rockets Drive Sled In "Rain" at Mach 2

A rocket sled which has reached Mach 2 on three separate occasions is being used to test rain erosion on radomes.

The sled, which is mounted on a 10,000-foot high-speed experimental track at the Air Force Flight Test Center, Edwards AFB, Calif., was designed and constructed by Convair Division of General Dynamics Corporation for the Materials Laboratory of the Wright Air Development Center, O.

Embodying a pusher and a sled, the test vehicle employs 12 rockets, each of which develops 11,000 pounds of thrust. Five are on the pusher, giving the vehicle a speed of 620 miles per hour in the first 950 feet. Seven other rockets on the sled then boost the speed to Mach 2 within 3800 feet.

Prior to the construction of the sled last January, rain erosion on radome models the size of bullets were tested by firing them through a spray. With the sled, however, a full size radome is mounted on the front and run through a spray equal to approximately eight inches of rainfall per hour. This is accomplished by erecting poles on each side of the track for 1200 feet. Nozzles on each pole direct a spray of carefully controlled "rainfall" across the track. Although the test lasts only six to seven seconds, the run, because of the volume of water used, is equivalent to approximately 16,500 feet of one-inch rainfall at Mach 2.

FISCAL YEAR CLEAN-UP

At the request of Defense Secretary Wilson all of the Services will do everything possible this year to pay fiscal '56 bills by the end of the year on 30 June.

The Army has said that where necessary it will keep disbursing offices open on that day. Navy and Air Force officials say that this action will not be necessary for their services.

The American Legion recently honored Leo M. Harvey, president of Harvey Aluminum, as an example of "the spirit of America and all that America means in terms of human liberty and individual opportunity" and for his contributions to the nation's industrial growth.

Text of the Legion citation, presented by J. Addington Wagner, National Commander, at a Torrance, Calif., luncheon in his honor, read:

"Presented by The American Legion to Leo M. Harvey, Citizen-Patriot, Industrial Leader, Philanthropist. In recognition of his contributions to the general economic welfare and to the military strength of the United States in three wars, 1917-1918, 1941-1945, 1950-1953. And in appreciation of his many personal acts of kindness and generosity on behalf of the children of America."

By Authority of the National Executive Committee.

Navy Buys Assault Minesweep Launches

The Navy has let a $605,000 contract for construction of twenty-five 36-foot minesweeping launches.

Designated MSL's, the round-bottomed, double-planked, wooden-hulled boats have 11 foot seven inch beams and 9.5 ton displacements. They are light enough to be carried by larger vessels from which they can be launched to carry out assault minesweeping missions in shoal waters.

Each MSL will carry two 220-hp Boeing 502110C gas turbine engines, one for propulsion and one for generator drive. The new engines incorporate an improved compressor and free power turbine.

The new engine features, the Navy says, result in a 25 per cent decrease in fuel consumption and a 20 per cent increase in power as compared to earlier models installed on existing minesweeping launches.

In addition, other improvements have been made to increase service life and simplify operation and maintenance.

Sagstad Shipyard Inc., Seattle, Wash., will build the sweep launches.

Navy Names Largest Atomic Sub "Triton"

The Navy's first nuclear powered radar picket submarine, SSR (N)-586, has been given the name USS Triton.

When the Triton, which is being built by the Electric Boat Division of the General Dynamics Corp., Groton, Conn., is completed she will be the largest submarine ever built. She will have a displacement of 5,450 tons light.

To date, the largest submarine ever constructed was the French corsair "Surcouf," which was placed in operation in 1929. The "Surcouf" was equipped to carry a small seaplane and had a displacement of 4,304.

The second largest was the USS Argonaut, SM-1, a fleet minelaying ship. She was built in 1927 and displaced 4,080 tons.

The SSR (N)-586—her keel was put down on 29 May—will be the third vessel to bear the name Triton. The first was the yard tug, YT-10, during the period 1899-1930. The second was the SS-201, built in 1940 and sunk by enemy destroyers in the Solomons area in March 1943.

Defense Lab Works on "Data Capsule" To Bring Back News From Outer Space

A "data capsule" to bring back a record of the flight of a missile into space is being developed by the new Special Defense Projects Department of General Electric.

The capsule would contain instrumentation of various types and the data gathered would be recorded on film or magnetic tape or both. The capsule, a sphere slightly larger than a basketball, would be ejected from the missile when the latter returns to the atmosphere and before it burns up from the heat created by its flight through the air. The capsule, slowed down by its high-drag spherical shape or by a parabrake if necessary, would then descend to the surface for subsequent recovery and study.

A DISCUSSION of this new research tool was had at a technical forum held in Washington, D. C. by GE's new Department. Moderator for the forum was Gerald A. Hoyt, manager-marketing for the SDPD. Many of the perplexing problems which U. S. scientists and engineers face in the development of space vehicles were discussed.

The data capsule project was explained by W. M. DeMerit, jr., manager of the SDPD recording and recovering engineering operation.

"Normally," he said, "the data capsule will be ejected by means of an explosive device just before impact of the research missile so that the maximum of in-flight data may be obtained. However, should the missile burn during the re-entry period, the data capsule will be ejected at this time so as to insure that the in-flight data to the point of burn-up may be obtained."

THE PROPOSED CAPSULE, a mock-up of which was exhibited, has a hard insulating shell, while additional protection against heating and shock is provided by foam plastic insulating material enclosing the instruments and records.

Dr. Yusuf A. Yoler, hypersonic specialist, pointed out that a long range ballistic missile may have to fly over 15 times the speed of sound at sea level over a considerable portion of its trajectory.

Samuel Levy, manager of stress analysis engineering, said that temperature difference between the inside and outside of a missile may be "great enough to cause the airframe to expand from one to two inches during flight."

THE SPECIAL DEFENSE PROJECTS Department already is engaged in an undisclosed number of research contracts with the Army, Navy, and Air Force. In addition, some work is being done with its own funds. The Department moved recently to Philadelphia where a multi-million dollar facility is being constructed. It will engage in research studies only and will not be in the production field.

Army Engineers Let AF Center Award

A contract for more than $2,500,000 to design and build controls for the world's largest supersonic wind tunnel has been awarded to General Dynamics Corporation by the Army Corps of Engineers which is constructing the facility for the Air Force's Arnold Engineering Development Center in Tullahoma, Tenn. Dynamics' Electric Boat Division in Groton, Conn., has overall responsibility and will execute the contract in partnership with another Dynamics division, Stromberg-

Carlson of Rochester, N. Y.

Intended for speed ranges up to four and a half times the speed of sound, the tunnel will be of the continuous flow type. This means that it can be operated for periods of several hours at a stretch, rather than the three or four minutes usually available with modern supersonic wind tunnels of the blowdown type.

Its testing chamber will be about 16 feet square. Existing supersonic tunnels are measured in inches.

Contracts

A contract valued in excess of $2-million has been awarded TEMCO Aircraft Corporation's Greenville, N. C., plant for the major overhaul of C-97 transports for the Air Force.

The Martin Company has ordered two combination hydraulic test stands from the Consolidated Diesel Electric Corporation. The test units will be used in checking the Air Force's Matador guided missile.

Ryan Aeronautical Company will build and flight test for the Air Force a new high altitude version of the Ryan Firebee jet drone missile. It will be a modified version of the Ryan Q-2A, incorporating a different jet engine, an improved control system and a high-altitude wing with increased area. Designated the XQ-2B, it will be capable of operation at altitudes in excess of 50,000 feet.

Dr. Sidney S. Browne, formerly associated with the Rand Corp. and North American Aviation in the fields of guidance and control, atomic energy research, and theoretical supersonic aerodynamics, has been named Assistant Director of Research and head of the new analysis and evaluation division at Lockheed's Missile Systems division.

Obituaries

Adm. Charles Turner Joy, USN-Ret.

Funeral services for Adm. Charles Turner Joy, USN-Ret., who died on 6 June at the U. S. Naval Hospital, San Diego, Calif., were held at the U. S. Naval Academy Chapel on 13 June with burial at the Academy Cemetery. He was 61 years old.

Noted for his negotiations as Chief U.N. Delegate during the Korean Truce talks for ten frustrating months at Kaesong and Panmunjom, Admiral Joy, a native of St. Louis, Mo., was graduated from the U. At the time of our entrance into WWII, Admiral Joy was Operations Officer aboard the cruiser Indianapolis, in which capacity he served through the Battle of Bougainville. In 1942 he was named Commander of the cruiser Louisville, when he helped drive the Japanese from Attu and Kiska in the Aleutians. After heading the Pacific Plans Division for a year, Admiral Joy, as Commander of a cruiser division, participated in the assaults on Guam, Saipan, and the Marianas, in the Battle of the Philippine Sea and strikes

A native of Chicago, Colonel Matkovic was commissioned in the Organized Reserve Corps in 1933 and was called to active duty in 1941. He was a graduate of Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., and of the John Marshall Law School. From service as an instructor at Ft. Benning, Ga., Colonel Matkovic went to the Southwest Pacific as a battalion commander. In 1946-47, he was PMS&T at the Staunton, Va. Military Academy, and from 1949 through 1952, he was assigned to the Logistics Division of the U. S. Army Headquarters, Europe. Returning to the States in 1953, Colonel Matkovic served in the Office of the Inspector General, until January of this year, when he was sent to Indochina as a member of the U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Group. In April, he returned to the United States and was retired from active duty for physical disability.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Marjorie C. Matkovic, of 2915 No. 7th St., Arlington, Va.; one son, Thomas J. Matkovic, jr.; two daughters, Marjorie and Mary Louise Matkovic; and his father, Mr. Ignatius Matkovic of Chicago.

Col. Leslie Haynes Wyman, USA-Ret.

Funeral services were held at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., for Col. Leslie Haynes Wyman, USA-Ret., on 18 June, with burial at Arlington National Cemetery. Colonel Wyman died of a coronary occlusion, at Walter Reed Army Hospital, on 13 June, at the age of 51.

Born at Marlboro, Mass., Colonel Wyman lived at Damariscotta, Me., until his appointment to the U. S. Military Academy in 1924. Graduating in the Class of 1928, he had completed 27 years of active service before ill health forced his retirement. Prior to his retirement in December 1955, Colonel Wyman was on duty at the U. S. Embassy at Karachi, Pakistan, where he was stricken with the first of a series of coronary attacks.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Josephine Wyman of 3805 Inverness Dr., Chevy Chase, Md.; one daughter, Miss Leslie Ann Wyman; one son, Samuel Haynes Wyman; two brothers, Gen. Willard Gordon Wyman, USA, Commanding General of the Continental Army Command, Ft. Monroe, Va., and Mr. John M. Wyman of Oakland, Calif.; and three sisters, Mrs. A. M. Dunlap of Alexandria, Va., Mrs. Watson R. Sim of Colton, Calif., and Miss Mary Alice Wyman of Damariscotta.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond
Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey

THE authorized strength of the Coast Guard has been boosted by 79 officers. The new authorization, resulting from Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey's annual computation of all officer needs in various ranks, including permanent, temporary, temporary service, and Reserve officers (excluding extra numbers), is 2,538.

The total strength figure, which goes into effect on 29 June, shows a percentage reduction of rear admirals from 0.75 to 0.59 and a corresponding increase for lieutenant commanders from 18.00 to 18.16.
